During the mortgage process

Avoid unwanted telemarketing calls and spam with one simple step

Opt-out of unsolicited offers before applying for a mortgage. This helps prevent other companies from calling you once we pull your credit. While we typically hold off on performing a hard credit pull until later in the process, it's important to know that when you apply for credit—such as a mortgage—your credit inquiry may alert other companies. These companies may then reach out to compete for your attention, leading to what's known as trigger leads. These calls can quickly become overwhelming, and opting out can help you stay in control of your experience.

By completing a quick and easy form online, you can opt-out and stop those calls before they start.
